Humboldt Made, Humboldt unique

For four days beginning Thursday -- Redwood Acres will host its annual fair, the second year with a focus on highlighting products from the North Coast.

The heart of that effort lies in Franceschi Hall -- the main exhibit building to the right of the main entrance. Those entering this year, will get a glimpse of a new set -- phase 1 of a particularly North Coast centric stage profiling the area's natural beauty.

Last week, set designer and artist Daniel C. Nyiri was at work in Redwood Acres fine arts building transforming muslin-covered frames into large boulders and redwood trees, while 15-foot, four-sided kiosks were in the works.

Nyiri, who has created set designs for movies, ballets and theater -- among other things -- showed off a model of the complete project that, in the future, will include a sawmill-like entrance on the outside of the building and a long, elevated area in the center, running nearly the full length of the structure.
